Nudie Jeans Transparency Policy

INTRODUCTION

Transparency is a key part of Nudie Jeans' sustainability work and a crucial first step for taking responsibility throughout the supply chain.

In 2013 we started our Transparency journey by launching our Production Guide, (www.nudiejeans.com/productionguide), a part of our website where information on our production chain is presented visually. Since, we have taken further steps and are including supply chain transparency on product level in our online shop. We believe that product transparency, along with efforts made to improve working conditions, will assure our customers that we are genuinely working to improve all parts of our products and production. We believe that honesty and transparency about our production chain and working conditions is valuable, creates credibility and is appreciated by our consumers. This will also help us be proactive and enable collaborations between industry partners for a more sustainable and transparent textile industry.

To offer full transparency, we require our suppliers to:

- Report the use of any new subcontractor and obtain confirmation from Nudie Jeans in writing before beginning production.
- Provide subcontractor's full company name, contact person and address.
- Ensure that subcontractors comply with the terms of this Policy. The supplier is liable for any actions in violation of this Policy.

Supplier information published in the production guide on Nudie Jeans' website or at the product card in the online shop:

- Factory location
- Type of products produced
- Type of supplier and starting year of collaboration
- Number of workers
- Summary of the most recent audit including both positive and negative findings and improvements made.
- General information on fabrics and trims.

REQUIREMENTS BY FAIR WEAR FOUNDATION

As a member of Fair Wear Foundation (www.fairwear.org), we have committed to disclosing our factory list as part of the apparel and footwear industry's efforts for more transparency to improve working conditions. We therefore request consent to share information about your facility via FWF in their database. The database is open only to FWF members. Increased supplier transparency will enable member brands to cooperate in follow-ups of corrective action plans, for example.

As part of Nudie Jeans' work with FWF, Nudie Jeans may share the following supplier information:

1. Factory name
2. Factory address
3. Production type
4. Parent company
5. Unique Identification Number
6. Number of workers (ranges only)
7. Audit information
8. Complaint information
9. Worker Education Program information

FWF will, in return:

- Publish all information listed above on the internal information management system, which other FWF member brands will be able to search. Note that:
- FWF member brands will be able to see which other FWF member brands are sourcing from your factory.
- FWF member brands will not be able to see any members brands from factories with which they have no sourcing relationship.
- Publish the information referred to in points 1 to 6 above on its website at <https://www.fairwear.org/>.
- Share the information referred to in points 1 to 6 above with local stakeholders that aim to improve labor conditions.
